Health Check Costa Rica

The times of emergency medical airlifts from Guanacaste to San Jose for top medical care will shortly be gone. Sources within the hospital have informed Health Check Costa Rica the Surgery Cima project in Liberia Guanacaste plans to open their doors in Feb 2012. Construction of the first section of the hospice project is all but complete and the hospital is in the midst of moving in equipment for a Feb opening. The hospice will be starting with only around ten beds but will be the 1st Joint Commission International Infirmary to open their doors in Guanacaste which is a region known typically for pristine beaches, and a tourism dependent economy. Side effects of this could reverberate across the area as Guanacaste begins the evolution from a basically tourist oriented economy to a wider based retirement and full time home destination.

The project has a new CIMA Hospital, a building with medical practice offices, a commercial section with trattorias and an apartment hotel building in particular targeting retirees and Medical Travel patients. The surgery, as well as the other buildings, would be found next to the Do-it Center in the canton of Carrillo, on the road between Liberia International Airport and the region's seaside resort areas, and purposely close to the global Airport that has become the center of Guanacaste's fantastic growth as a visitor destination in the last ten years. This personal surgery not only would serve the local inhabitants of Guanacaste but the growing foreign customers seeking high-quality care."The number of patients may change due to the fact that these facilities may not only serve patients from across the province, but also may serve foreigners visiting for Medical Travel facilitator purposes.

Guanacaste has undergone major transformations in recent years as the Government of Costa Rica has cleverly been focusing on major substructure projects including road strategies and telecommunication framework each of which have seen monumental leaps forward in recent times. Previously hard to reach beaches now boast beautifully paved roads complete with reflectors, painted lines and street lights; something old hands will remember did not exist on any roads just a couple of short years ago.

Additionally, thru countless private speculators Guanacaste has seen the enlargement and creation of everything from International American Faculties to private surgery hospitals, orthopedic centres, cosmetic surgery spas, and a spread of spas, mental well-being retreats, recovery centres, and more. The major private investment dollars flowing into major medical facilities in Liberia to the tune of virtually half a billion greenbacks is having a ripple effect across Guanacaste as folks follow the smart money into niche areas of the booming Medical Tourism industry. With skyrocketing debate and curving costs of Medical Care in the U. S., the ever increasing wait times in the socialized arena of Canadian Medical care coupled with the enlargement of nonstop flights into the area from both countries, Medical Tourism in Guanacaste is poised for a boom, and the opening of the long awaited CIMA branch in Liberia represents the first major stride in this direction.

. Worldwide accredited medical therapy truly is the final piece of the puzzle for Guanacaste and defines a giant leap in the marketability of the area both as a Medical Travel and retirement destination but just as importantly as a true long-term alternative life-style choice for many American. Low crime pretty weather and now wonderful medical care, quality accredited education, and all the fantastic things that have driven tourists here in mobs is enhanced by the development of the regions first Internationally commissioned surgery. Truly the best is still to come.
