London, the capital of the United Kingdom, is one of the most visited cities in the world. The metropolis is exciting yet it also hides an interesting history that anyone should try to discover. You can discover more about London's culture and people by doing the following seven things while you are there:

Visiting the British Museum is compulsory once you arrive there. You can see unique archeological ruins, objects from ancient times and also paintings and other items. The building itself is amazing and inspiring, and taking a guided tour is more than enough to expand your cultural knowledge.

If you are in London with your children, you wouldn't want to miss the great experience of sleeping in a museum. Torch-lit puzzle trails and microscope sessions are included in the exciting sleepovers offered by the National History Museum.

All the party animals out there should know that the best fun that you can have in London while listening to great music is in the Ministry of Sound club. Along with trance, techno and house music, the interior will really make you feel in a unique place, since the club has a labyrinthine interior and it is housed in an old bus depot.

Those who are passionate about British literature can go see shows at Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, a replica Elizabethan building that perfectly imitates theatres in the Shakespearian age.

Going to Davenport's Magic Shop in London is exactly what you must do if you are into mystical activities and you would like to know more about magic. You can purchase prank props and card tricks for your friends, and you can also buy books with spells and many more.

Tourists that really like Jive music should plan their night at the Rivoli Ballroom. Every third Saturday of the month, you can listen and dance on Jive live music along with amateur dancers and enthusiasts. The setting is fantastic and because most of those who go there are beginners, you don't have to be embarrassed if you miss some moves.

The changing of the guard at 11.30 AM sharp should not be missed. It can be witnessed only from outside the Buckingham Palace's front gates and you have to arrive earlier since there are many tourists who usually gather to see it.

If you want to both increase your knowledge and have fun in London, you should do the seven things listed above.

Of course London is not the only interesting place in England. You might want to go sightseeing around the countryside to see some of the castles which are very interesting for history buffs. And if you are a huge Beatles fan you may also want to take a trip to Liverpool, the birthplace of the Fab Four, which is about 4 hours away.
